“Nancy Easterbrook has always been my scuba hero. When I started working as a dive instructor in 2005, I remember reading about her in dive magazines. I was always so impressed with all she was doing (and had been doing for the previous 10 years) for the diving industry. She was a woman running her own company in the Cayman Islands while raising two children.”
Moreover, she was instrumental in bringing Nitrox and tech diving to Grand Cayman. She never stood by and let things happen — she was the one making things happen. That has always impressed me. In a word, she’s determined. “No” is not a word that exists in her vocabulary, and if she’s told no, she just finds another way to make it happen.

“One example is the wreck of the U.S.S. Kittiwake in Grand Cayman. After most people had given up on the project, she carried on until it happened. We share the same motto: That you can accomplish anything as long as you put your mind to it. Now that I am the owner of her baby, Divetech Scuba Center, I hope to carry on with her determination in other aspects of the diving industry to keep this community great for everyone, while maintaining and growing the great reputation Divetech has enjoyed for the past 23 years.”
